What is the Bachelor of Social Sciences?

Social Sciences is a field of study that helps us make sense of the complex world we inhabit. In so doing, this field of study enables us to envision new possibilities for a better, more equitable human society. Boston's Bachelor of Social Sciences develops students with the necessary critical thinking skills to become both agents of change and influencers within a wide range of industries on local, national and global stages. Students are exposed to the following subjects: Psychology, Sociology, Anthropology, Economics and Management Sciences.

Benefit from International Recognition. Boston is accredited with the British Accreditation Council!

How is the Boston Bachelor of Social Sciences different?

The Bachelor of Social Sciences brings together a unique combination of the social and management sciences. The interface between these two academic disciplines will enable graduates to effectively operate in teams within a range of sectors, including local government, community organisations, and multi-national corporations. By combining solid theory and work-informed practice, the qualification will enable graduates to approach organisational growth and development, social/institutional health and well-being, economic growth and stability, at every level of society, in a holistic and creative way.

Why should a student study this qualification?

The challenges facing Africa in the twenty-first century demands a new generation of graduates who will think in fresh and innovative ways about the common good as both an economically sustainable and socially viable objective. Prospective students who are energised by the many possibilities for making a difference in society will find the BSocSci intellectually stimulating and practically robust. With a deep understanding of human society and social relationships in all their complexity, graduates will be able to make sense of a range of critical topics as part of a broader conversation about improving the quality of life and economic viability.

Minimum Entry Requirements

A minimum requirement for admission into the degree is a:

- National Senior Certificate (NSC), with English as one of the subjects passed and with endorsement for admission to Bachelor's degree study; or
- National Certificate (Vocational) (NC(V)), with English as one of the subjects passed and with endorsement for admission to Bachelor's degree study; or
- Prior to 2009, Senior Certificate with English as one of the subjects passed.

Alternative Entry Pathways

A number of higher education qualifications may meet the requirements for admission or advanced placement into the degree:

- Diploma, NQF Level 5 (OQSF), minimum credits 240; or
- Higher Certificate, NQF (HEQSF) Level 5, minimum Credits 120; or
- Advanced Certificate, NQF (HEQSF) Level 6, minimum Credits 120; or
- Diploma, NQF (HEQSF) Level 6, minimum Credits 240 or 360; or
- Advanced Diploma, NQF (HEQSF) Level 7 minimum Credits 120; or
- Equivalent qualification from a foreign higher education institution, see section on Foreign Applicants below.

Important Notes for Foreign Applicants

See sections on Minimum Entry Requirements for Foreign Applicants and Alternative Entry Pathways for Foreign Applicants on page 11 of the Fact Sheet. Irrespective of meeting the Minimum Entry Requirements for Foreign Applicants, international students who do not hold a South African school leaving certificate must present a Grade 12 equivalence verification with endorsement for admission to Bachelor's degree study from the South African Matriculation Board.

The Board can be contacted on +27-(0)10-591-4401/2 or applications@usaf.ac.za or visit he-enrol.ac.za. Also, foreign applicants may be required to provide proof of proficiency in English (TOEFL score of 550, or IELTS overall band score of 6.0.) prior to admission to the qualification. Students who have qualifications from foreign higher education institutions must present an equivalence certificate from the South African Qualifications Authority (SAQA) who can be contacted on +27-(0)12-431-5070 or customercare@saqa.org.za or visit <http://www.saqa.org.za/index.php>

Applying to Transfer-in Credits

Boston allows students with completed credits from recognised education institutions to apply for credit accumulation and transfer (CAT). In the case of complete qualifications, a maximum of 50% of the credits of a completed qualification may be transferred-in. Credit transfers will only be considered if accompanied by full academic records with a statement of satisfactory or good conduct. Students interested in applying will be considered individually by the Academic Committee based at Head Office; see the relevant section in the Prospectus and the 'Application for Admission Form' online.

RPL Applicants

Boston admits a small number of students through Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL). Applicants interested in applying through RPL will be considered individually by the Academic Committee based at Head Office; see the relevant section in the Prospectus and the 'Application for Admission Form' online.

What is the Duration of Study?

Based on the credits and notional hours of this qualification, the minimum duration is six (6) semesters over three (3) years, and the maximum duration is nine (9) years. For more information, see Table on page 4.

What is the Purpose of the Qualification?

The purpose of the qualification is to ensure that graduates are equipped with the knowledge, theory and methodology of the foundational disciplines of sociology, anthropology and psychology. Grounding graduates in these disciplines will enable them to demonstrate initiative and responsibility in a professional or academic context where application of the principles and theory are emphasised as a basis for entry into the labour market, professional training, postgraduate study, or professional practice in a wide range of careers within civil society, the public or private sectors. The modules within the Bachelor of Social Sciences are developed in a progressive manner covering the major functional specialisations and culminating in an integrated way, providing broad strategic context for graduates to gain insight into and a greater understanding of how individuals and groups interact in local, national and global contexts.

The programme includes instruction in social theory, social science research methods, social organisation and structure, public administration, governance and ethics, workplace psychology, anthropology, socioeconomics, social change, family structures, social deviance, and sexuality and HIV education. Professional communication and computer literacy skills underpin all these areas. Furthermore, a few elective options are available in entrepreneurship, marketing and management to incorporate the third pillar of society, that of the private sector.

The breadth and depth of learning achieved by graduates reflect a broad repertoire of skill- and knowledge-sets consisting of principles, theoretical engagement and levels of intellectual independence characteristic of a first Bachelor's Degree within the Social Sciences and Humanities, facilitating access to the world of work and promotes critical and analytical citizenship. For a rapidly evolving and growing nation, this qualification forms part of the increase in the provision of graduates with higher order capabilities to grow the economy, to advance social transformation, and to remain regionally relevant and globally competitive.

The qualification also provides exciting career opportunities within Government Departments and NGO's/NPO's, Communications and Public Relations, Media and Advertising, Health Provision, Community Services, Consultancy Firms, Education and Management, for example:

- Research or Social Planning
- Market Research and Analysis
- Project Manager
- Managers
- Monitoring and Impact Assessment Researchers

- Assistant to Social Psychologist
- Social Worker
- Correctional Officer
- Media/Marketing/Trade/Business Researcher
- Customer Advocate
- Public Relations Person
- Organisational or Human Resource Planner
- Gender Equality/Equity Consultant
- Social Entrepreneur

What are the Programme Outcomes?

On completion of the programme, graduates will have the necessary knowledge and practical skills required to:

- Operate effectively in the workplace using a number of Windows-based end-user applications
- Apply knowledge, theory and methodology of the disciplines of sociology, anthropology and psychology.
- Demonstrate competence in the ability to structure and present logical arguments, critically analyse material and opinions, and make informed decisions about what is happening at the forefront of contemporary society.
- Demonstrate competence in understanding ethical issues, standards, and/or public responsibility in relation to professional practice.
- Demonstrate competence in social research skills.
- Demonstrate effective communication, interpersonal and presentation skills.

What do I require to Pass a Module?

Students will need an overall mark of fifty percent (50%) to pass a module. Students who do not achieve a pass mark in a summative assessment (SA1 and/or SA2) may be provided one (1) further opportunity to retake (supplement) the summative assessment at an additional re-assessment fee.

How is the Overall Mark Calculated?

The overall mark will be calculated from the student's performance on formative assessments (FA's) and summative assessments (SA's).

What are the Curriculum and Fees?

The Boston Bachelor of Social Sciences degree requires twenty-eight (28) modules.

Please note that Module Fees listed in the Table are for the 2019 academic year.

Prescribed textbooks are included in the fees. However, this is not guaranteed in future.

For more information, see pages 20 to 24 for the Catalogue Description of each module.

Summative assessments in the form of a final exam or capstone project (SA1), will count fifty percent (50%), and a research or reflective essay (SA2) will count ten percent (10%) towards the overall mark.

Assessment Strategy 4 (AS4): Formative assessments (FA1 and FA2), also known as assignments or tests, will count forty percent (40%) - twenty percent (20%) each - towards the overall mark. Summative assessments in the form of a final exam or capstone project (SA1), will count fifty percent (50%), and a research or reflective essay (SA2) will count ten percent (10%) towards the overall mark.

Assessment Strategy W (ASW): Formative assessments (FA1 and FA2), also known as assignments, will count forty percent (40%) - twenty percent (20%) each - towards the overall mark. Summative assessments in the form of a practicum will count forty percent (40%), and a research or reflective essay (SA2) will count twenty percent (20%) towards the overall mark.

What are the Rules of Module Combination?

The Boston Bachelor of Social Sciences degree requires twenty-eight (28) modules.

- Students will complete twenty-three (23) compulsory modules.
- In addition to the compulsory modules, students will complete three (3) modules as part of their minor selection in Year 1 and Year 2, and two (2) modules as part of their management-related electives in Year 2 and 3, as follows:
 - In Academic Year 1, select either of the following minors:
 - Anthropology 1 (HCGE130-1) OR
 - Economics 1 (HECO130-1)
 - In Academic Year 2, follow through with the selected minor of Year 1, with either:
 - Anthropology 2A (HCGE231-1) and Anthropology 2B (HCGE232-1) OR
 - Economics 2A (HECO231-1) and Economics 2B (HECO232-1)
 - Also, in Academic Year 2, choose between one (1) of the following management electives:

 - Business Management 2 (HBMN330-1) OR
 - Marketing Management 3 (HMKT33001) OR
 - Geography of Politics (HGOP330-1).

How many modules can I take each semester?

The minimum is one (1) module per semester; this will ensure students remain academically active. The maximum number of modules you can take in any one (1) semester is dependent on the number of credits per module. It is recommended for full-time working adults to consider completing the programme in a duration exceeding the minimum period of three (3) years, which implies electing to take fewer modules per semester.

- ColCampus promotes anytime, anywhere learning while connecting students to Educators and learning resources in a safe, secure online environment.

What materials/resources will I require in order to Study?

It is compulsory that students have access to a computer and the internet. Certain course material and/or notes and assessments will only be accessible online or electronically.

Boston will provide all study guides and/or prescribed texts, module information, timetables, and access to ColCampus for filmed lectures, formal assessments, as well as teaching and learning support for each module. Therefore, there will be no requirement to purchase any additional prescribed materials.

What is a Support Centre?

Boston's network of Support Centres grants our students access to computers and ColCampus for assessments, filmed lectures, electronic library facilities, as well as examination venues and administrative services. Students must select a single Support Centre and may make use of the facilities for the duration of their studies; see attached list.

Where do I complete my Assessments?

Students must select the same Support Centre for assessment purposes. The venue for formative and summative assessments will depend on the specific assessment formats of each module.

- Assignments, research reports, essays, etc. will be uploaded into our online LMS ColCampus, which can be done from home, or at the selected Support Centre.
- Invigilated tests and examination sittings will be conducted at Support Centres or designated exam venues.
- Research presentations and orals will be conducted via Skype at Support Centres or designated proctored venues.

Who will provide me with Academic and Tuition Support?

Boston has appointed qualified and experienced Educators to provide support to learners. Students can contact Educators any time via ColCampus, through e-mail, or book a telephonic, or Skype appointment. Face-to-face appointments can also be arranged, but these will be by appointment only and will take place exclusively at Boston's Head Office.

Can I further my studies when I graduate?

The qualification is registered at NQF (HEQSF) Level 7 and will provide for articulation options into NQF (HEQSF) Levels 6, 7 or 8 qualifications. Graduates may proceed to Advanced Diplomas, Postgraduate Diplomas or Honour's degrees in a variety of disciplines at any number of public universities, private or foreign higher education institutions. To gain entry into these programmes, students will have to meet the admission and selection criteria of the receiving institution.

Catalogue Descriptions

Sociology 1

Sociology is the study of social relationships and the functioning of structures and institutions that make up society. In the first semester, students are introduced to the discipline of Sociology and the ways in which sociologists have tried to make sense of the world—especially the production and experience of social order(s), social change and inequality—around us. It introduces students to institutions, processes, and structures that shape the relationship of the individual in relation to society, and introduces students to the sociological imagination as a tool to understand these. The modules, further, introduce students to various understandings of race, class, and gender and examines how they intersect to make visible the various inequalities in South African society.

Semester A introduces students to the theory and methodology of Sociology, the processes through which group identity is formed and begins to establish an understanding of the institutions that form the basis of society.

Semester B builds on these understandings before covering specific challenges faced within society and focusing specifically on Sociology within the South African context.

Psychology 1

Psychology is the study of the mind and behaviour, including the biological, social and environmental factors that influence these. In Psychology 1, students are given a general orientation to the broad discipline of psychology, placing it within the African context. It covers such key areas as the science of Psychology, the biology of behaviour, learning, development, emotion, sexuality and gender, personality, introduction to psychological disorders, introduction to methods of therapy and introduction to Social Psychology.

In Semester A, students focus on a broad introduction to Psychology, personality and development, and the development of individual thinking and behaving. Semester B builds on Semester A by placing Psychology and personhood within a social, professional and geographical context. It engages the social and contextual elements of personhood, Psychology and health, and African and Eastern psychologies.

Introduction to Anthropology

This module provides a general orientation to the field of anthropology as part of the foundational learning for the Social Sciences. In this module the Human Experience is explored which is concerned with questions of what it means to be and become human and proceeds with the study of the development of culture and society from past to present, from the strange to the familiar. The syllabus covers a comparative study of human societies and cultures of the world; cross-cultural investigations of social organisation, political, economic, religious, and family systems. The content presents an integrated coverage of race, class, gender, and ethnicity and gets students thinking about the consequences of globalisation and (sometimes) their behaviour.

Anthropology 1

A deep understanding of, and appreciation for, cultural diversity, social dynamics, and human complexity are essential for life and work in both a South African and a global context. Anthropology 1 provides students with a thorough introduction to cultural anthropology, including key theory and methodology from classic and contemporary thinkers in the field. This module builds on the introduction to the discipline of anthropology provided in The Human Experience, covering three unifying themes: 1) the varied ways humans face the challenges of existence, 2) the connections between culture and biology in shaping human beliefs and behaviour, and 3) the impact of globalization on peoples and cultures around the world.

Economics 1

The purpose of the Economics 1 module is to expose the proactive and competent manager to the basic principles of macro and microeconomics, which are essential for survival in the current dynamic and global markets. Students will be able to recognise and understand economics as a science and be able to discuss the basic problems in economics. They will have gained an understanding of how different economic systems attempt to solve the basic economic questions, as well as be able to give a macro- and micro-economic interpretation of the economic cycle and describe how the various participants in a mixed economy interrelate.

Public Administration

Public Administration provides a thorough understanding of the foundational theories, principles and concepts of public administration. This includes an understanding of the role and organisation of the state, policy management, the quality of policy implementation, strategic management and national planning, discussions of administrative justice and the ethical conduct in public administration.

Computer Literacy (Intro to PC, Windows, Word, Outlook)

The purpose of HCLT101-1 is to introduce students to a general overview and introduction to the world of computers and computing terminology. The module will provide the student with a proficiency in the functions of a Computer Hardware and Software and how information is processed in a computer.

Students are also introduced to the Windows 10 operating system – a set of computer programs that manage the computer's hardware and software interactions. The approach adopted in this module enables the learner to become a competent user of Windows 10, by balancing theory with extensive practice through a rich collection of "hands-on" tasks and activities.

Students also receive an overview of one of the most sophisticated word-processing programmes available today, Microsoft Word 2016. The student will gain capabilities in producing professional documents, creating letters, memorandums, faxes, annual reports, and newsletters.

Lastly, students are introduced to Outlook 2016, a personal information manager. Although often used mainly as an email application, it also includes a calendar, task manager, contact manager, note taking, journal, and web browsing.

Computer Literacy Advanced (Spreadsheets, Spreadsheets Advanced, Database, Presentation Graphics)

The purpose of advanced computer literacy is to further develop students' ability within the world of computers and computing terminology. The module will provide the student with a proficiency in the use of spreadsheets, databases and presentation graphics.

Academic Literacy

The purpose of Academic Literacy is to introduce students to the essential literacies required in the present academic context. A number of different factors influence every situation in which we find ourselves, and this is especially true of the job market – both within South Africa and internationally. While there may be many opportunities, there are also many demands. As such, it is vital to gain a strong academic foundation and make these skills work for you. Your learning should not be viewed in isolation; ultimately, it should enable you to find employment, and even to make a valuable contribution to society.

Sociology 2

This module builds on the understandings from Sociology 1. Students look more deeply at the building blocks of society, the processes through which they exert influence, inequalities within society and the role of sociology in responding to these. In Semester A, Sociology of Institutions introduces students to the most important institutions that shape human endeavour and relationship, including the state, religion, family and work/labour. It deepens the introduction to these institutions to which students have already been exposed. Students' understanding of the individual in context is amplified. In Semester B, Poverty and Development examine theories of poverty and the solutions offered by development theory and policy, especially in the African context. This module exposes students to a deepening understanding of the inequalities to which they are introduced in the first-year and provides an important and useful context for the articulation of these theories.

Psychology 2

Psychology 2 builds on ideas and theories of individual and social psychology from Psychology 1. In Semester A, students are exposed to the psychological theories and views of personhood. Drawing on contemporary approaches, the module introduces students to systematic, psychodynamic, behavioural, cognitive and existential components, considering the applicability of these within an African context. This module also takes seriously the peculiarly African take on the human person. In Semester B, Social Psychology, students examine the relationship between the individual and society. The module covers theories such as social identity theory and contact theory to make sense of relationships between social groups and to make sense of psychological factors involved in social conflicts like racism and sexism.

Anthropology 2

Anthropology 2 advances the study of what it means to be and become human. It engages with the presence of multiple stories surrounding us, narrating and directing our humanity. In this module students will engage with anthropology in the local and global context, the effects of the ever-present nature of media in our lives, histories of colonisation and post-colonial rhetoric on our experience and expression of our humanity. Through this module students will learn to apply research methodologies particularly suited to the study of these topics.

Semester A will focus on Gender, Culture and Transnationalism while the module, in Semester B, will investigate Ethnography and Postcolonial Africa.

Economics 2

Economics 2 adopts a critical and engaged approach to economic theories. Students are exposed to economics as a holistic study of how people make choices, in the face of scarcity, about the totality of their resources, whether as individuals or organisations within the global society. Building on Economics I, the module amplifies the varied approaches to economic theory and considers how each offers valuable and differentiated insight into the complex role economics plays in society. The module seeks to empower students to engage with and confront—from an economic perspective—the many problems and challenges faced by modern society, encouraging creative and critical solutions within the spheres of government, business, and civil society. The scope of this module will expose students in fundamental ways to Environmental Economics, Social Economics, Economics of Social Issues, and African and Informal Economies.

Research Methods and Statistics I

The purpose of Research Methods and Statistics is to provide students with a solid foundation for the discipline of research in the Social Sciences. It will build on the research methodologies taught through Psychology 1, Sociology 1 and Anthropology 1. Furthermore, it will develop students' ability to design research projects, apply research methods and statistical analysis, demonstrate an understanding of research ethics, and clearly communicate the results of a research project. Importantly, students will be able to evaluate the validity of research designs, data and conclusions of research and consultancy studies carried out by others.

Public Discourse Law

Public Discourse Law aims to provide students with a basic knowledge of the South African legal context, including an understanding of the Constitution. This module aims to provide students with a basic knowledge of the South African legal context in which public discourse takes place. The broader programme equips students with deep theoretical and functional knowledge of various elements of the broad public discourse process, and this module places that knowledge in a legal and regulatory context for the student. Successful students will leave the module with the necessary skills and knowledge to experience and partake in public discourse in any of its various manifestations with knowledge of the legal framework and implications of such communication. Anyone working towards equality and social justice in South Africa, whether it be in civil society or government, requires a thorough understanding of the legal context that guides and enables their work.

Project Management

This module provides a practical and comprehensive introduction to the concepts and principles of project management. The module equips students with current insights into the theory and practice of project management. The first theme of the module introduces students to project management structures within organisations and the project management lifecycle. That is followed by a comprehensive overview of the processes involved in project initiation and selection, including feasibility analyses. Finally, the module equips students with core skills needed in the project management function, including planning, budgeting, workflow management, estimations and various methods of measuring and improving performance in a project management context. Successful students will leave this module with relevant and current knowledge of the concepts, processes and skills involved in project management.

Entrepreneurship 2 (Entrepreneurship and Small Business Management)

This module provides the student with a basic working knowledge of the entrepreneurial process and the process of small business creation and management. To do this, the module provides a comprehensive introduction to the economic, financial and business concepts central to an understanding of entrepreneurship, with a specific focus on small businesses. The module builds knowledge and skills around the life cycle of an entrepreneurial business: from conception to implementation and management, to harvesting and exit strategies. This central structure of the module provides a student with a basic working knowledge of the process of small business creation and management as well as the essential concepts underlying the entrepreneurial process.

Financial Management (for Non-Financial Managers)

Financial Management equips students with the theoretical knowledge and practical skills to manage the finances of an organisation. The module develops three core skills: the analysis of financial information, the management of asset structures, and the management of financial structures. Financial management is the area of capacity identified as most seriously lacking in civil society. It is also highly transferable to and valued in the corporate sector.

Business Management 2 (Strategic Management)

Strategic Management enables students to contextualise and evaluate strategy, implement and measure the execution of strategies, as well as identify and manage improvement and change in organisations continuously. This is another area of capacity lacking in civil society and of obvious value in the corporate sector.

Sociology 3

Sociology of Power, Semester A, draws on different theories of power to deepen students' understanding of power and how it operates to shape our social, cultural, and political worlds. The module draws on the previous years' understanding of power and introduces new theory to problematise and amplify the student's engagement with the notion of power. In the Semester B, Contemporary Social Issues brings all the sociological theory together to make sense of current social troubles such as unemployment, crime, substance abuse, gender-based violence etc. It revisits theories covered in the previous years, as well as new contributions to bring these issues into sharper focus from a sociological perspective.

Psychology 3

Semester A, Psychopathology, introduces students to abnormal psychology examining classification disorders, diagnosis, symptoms, causes, and treatment of various conditions. The link between social context, culture, and pathology is also explored. This link forms a dovetail with Anthropology (should students opt for this minor), which provides students with a theoretical framework for the notion of culture. In Semester B, Psychological Interventions provides students with a grounding in therapeutic approaches and theoretical orientations. This module builds on the theoretical foundations of the first and second years (in Psychological Theories of the Person, in particular). Students gain an understanding of what makes for a good intervention and how to apply them in certain contexts. This module dovetails with Contemporary Social Issues in preparing graduates to work holistically in addressing the psychological dimensions inherent of social issues.

Research Methods and Statistics 2

This module takes a holistic approach to research, preparing students to work independently using qualitative and quantitative research methodologies to address complex problems. Students will learn to select and develop appropriate methodology, carry out data collection and data analysis to develop evidence-based solutions and theory-driven arguments. The module will develop students' ability to carry out research ethically and professionally.

Leadership, Ethics and Governance

Leadership, Ethics and Governance aims to shape critical thinkers about the interaction between the concepts of ethics, leadership and governance. Governance and leadership are key capacities lacking in civil society and many would argue government also. This module prepares students to actively participate, influencing within all areas of society, towards good governance.

Work Integrated Learning

The purpose of Work Integrated Learning is a process through which students develop knowledge, skills, and values from direct experiences outside a traditional academic setting. Experiential learning encompasses a variety of activities including undergraduate research and other creative and professional work experiences. Well-planned and assessed work integrated learning programmes can stimulate academic inquiry by promoting interdisciplinary learning, civic engagement, career development, cultural awareness, leadership, and other professional and intellectual skills. Learning that is considered "integrated" contain all the following elements:

Reflection, critical analysis and synthesis

Opportunities for students to take initiative, make decisions, and be accountable for the results

Opportunities for students to engage intellectually, creatively, emotionally, socially, or physically

A designed learning experience that includes the possibility to learn from natural consequences, mistakes, and successes.

Geography of Politics

Geography of Politics aims to equip students with the language, knowledge and skills necessary for critical engagement with geopolitics in a modern world. The module guides students through the insights and theories that geopolitics provide for our understanding of history. These theories are then explored with reference to pertinent historical moments and how they can be explained and understood from a geographical viewpoint. The final theme of the module applies these lessons learnt to present crises in Europe, Russia, China, the Indian subcontinent, Turkey, Iran and the Middle East.

Entrepreneurship 3 (New Venture Creation)

The purpose of the module is to provide the learner with more insight of entrepreneurs' world. It takes the learner into an array of topics that include entrepreneurial revolution; entrepreneurial process; recognising and evaluating opportunities; the business plan; resource requirements and 'building the team'; entrepreneurial finance, obtaining venture and growth capital; valuation, structure and negotiation; managing the harvest and beyond.

Business Management 3 (Global Business Management)

The purpose of Business Management 3 is to provide an understanding of the significance and progression of international business, understanding international trade, analysing the macro-environmental matrix, global business strategy, international organisational culture and structures, international strategy – joint ventures, entry strategies and decisions, implementation, control and problem-solving, global communication and negotiation, global human resource management - mentorship and training.

Marketing Management 3 (Services Marketing)

The purpose of Marketing Management 3 is to focus on an array of topics that include: introduction to services marketing; management of service quality; consumer decision-making; service development and design; pricing services; the service delivery process; managing the roles of employees, customers and the physical environment in service delivery; managing demand and capacity; building customer relationships and loyalty and service recovery.
